Quickly, as if he understands, the seal flops off his seat. He drops back into the deep blue sea. “Goodbye real seal. We will miss you,” said the kids sadly. The crowd cheers and waves the seal goodbye.

A Real Seal

(ea e-e ey e y ie)

“Daddy, can we get ice creams, please, please, please?” said Sally. It is a hot, sunny day and the kids go to the seaside with their Dad. They see a crowd of people at the beach.

“Wild animals do not need treats,” said Sally. “These kids are right,” said a lady. “The seal might get sick,” she said.

All of a sudden, a man tries to feed the seal his ice cream. “Stop, no!” yells Sally. Sally and Chip are furious. “Please do not feed the seal the ice cream. He lives in the sea and he eats fish, not ice cream,” explains Chip.

“Wait, what are all those people crowding around?” said Chip. The kids rush up to get a closer look. Children are shrieking with delight.

“Daddy, it’s a real seal!” squeals Sally. “I don’t believe it,” said Chip. “We have never seen a real seal before,” he said.

There on a big, black rock is the seal. The seal looks happy and suns himself in the summer heat. The seal taps and claps its feet. He looks like the chief of the beach.
