

Plums in the Moonlight

Deep in the dark forest, the gloom sets in. Pip turns on the glass lamp. Pat blinks in the light.

Plums in the Moonlight

“I think we need a plan, Pat,” said Pip.
“A plan to get out of here,” said Pat.

Plums in the Moonlight

There is a glint of green light in the mist.
It is Og. Og blends into the forest.

Plums in the Moonlight

Og signals to them to come. “Come with me,” Og said. “I have some plump, plums for you,” he said.

Plums in the Moonlight

Pat and Pip look blank. “Plums?” Pat asks. Pip frowns. “Yes, fresh, plump plums. They will set you free from the forest,” said Og.

Plums in the Moonlight

Pat and Pip go with Og to his den. The plums are good. The gloom in the forest lifts. The Moon looks bright. Pip and Pat can see the trail out.

Plums in the Moonlight

“We are glad to have met you,” said Pat.
“We are glad for the plums,” said Pip.
“Thank you, Og,” they said.

Plums in the Moonlight

Plums in the Moonlight

Plums in the Moonlight

