

Smell the Socks

“Ted, come quick!” said the King. “I have lost my socks,” he said. “I am the King of the Land and I have lost my socks!” said the King. The King jumps up and down.

Smell the Socks

“Tell me, did you sweep them up with a brush and put them in the trash?” asks Ted. Ted checks the trash can. “No, I did not,” said the King.

Smell the Socks

“Tell me, did you drop them in the duck pond?” asks Ted. Ted checks in the King’s duck pond. “No, I did not,” said the King.

Smell the Socks

“How about under a chair?” said Ted. “They are not under a chair,” said the King.

Smell the Socks

“Tell me, did you put them under the bed?” asks Ted. Ted checks under the bed. “No, I did not,” said the King. The King stamps his feet. The King is getting cross.

Smell the Socks

“King, I can smell something here,” said Ted. “I can smell socks. The smell is not sweet,” said Ted. The King grins.

Smell the Socks

Ted pulls out the socks. “Ted, you are smart. My socks! Thank you,” said the King.

Smell the Socks

Smell the Socks

Smell the Socks

