“Sid, the sun is out today! There are no clouds about. Let’s hop on the boat. I want to see what is down that bend in the river,” said Pip.

Sid and Pip hop on. Sid sits in his seat. He is the scout. Pip steers the boat. The boat is quick. The river sprays onto the boat. It is so fast.

“How about we pull up here on the river bank,” said Sid. “Good. We can stay for an hour here,” said Pip.

“Yuck! There are big cobwebs here,” said Sid. “Look! I have spied something. I have found a treehouse,” said Pip. Pip points up high in the trees.

Pip shivers. “I feel a chill,” she said. “Keep out of here, I say!” something cried. Sid and Pip jump with fright. “What did we just hear?” asks Pip. Sid shrugs. “Can you at least repeat that?” said Pip. “I say, keep out of here!” it cried.

“Come on out then!” cried Sid. A little mouse creeps out of the treehouse. “If I may, this is my house and my beach. Keep out!” he said.

“Can we stay and play on the beach, just for an hour?” asks Pip. “What do you have for me, then?” said the mouse. “A pie and some fried fish,” said Sid. “Perfect, that is a treat for a mouse. You can stay, just for an hour,” grins the mouse.
