

Sam and the Hawk

Sam keeps going on her long trek. It has been days now. She feels lost in the clifftop. Dusk sets in. "I must stop. It will get dark soon," she said.

Sam and the Hawk

Sam sets up camp for the night, near the river bank. She puts up her tent and sets up her bed with soft straw. Sam yawns and goes to bed.

Sam and the Hawk

Sam drifts off to sleep. In her dreams, a hawk comes to her. The hawk has sharp claws and big wings.

Sam and the Hawk

"Little one, I am not foe. I bring you no woe," said the hawk. "Follow the next bend in the river and you will get there," said the hawk.

Sam and the Hawk

In her dream, she follows the hawk. It brings her to her house. She sees her lush, green lawn. She spies her tomatoes and her potatoes in the garden.

Sam and the Hawk

In a flash, the hawk goes. The dream is over. Sam gets up. Resting next to her bed, is a claw. Sam's jaw drops.

Sam and the Hawk

"The hawk has been here. Was it just a dream?" said Sam. The daylight is bright. Sam spies the next bend in the river up ahead. "The hawk is right. I will get there," said Sam.
