

Sailing the Seven Seas

Ted and Mat are studying in the school library. They have some research to do on the topic of pirates. Mat picks up a book and begins to read from it. Ted is scribbling down some notes.

“Pirates were known to sail the seven seas,” reads Mat. “Hold on a minute. What does it mean to “Sail the Seven Seas?” asks Ted.

“I think it’s a term used to describe sailors and pirates who have sailed to, and returned from, the other side of the world,” said Mat. “That makes sense. What else do we need to know about pirates?” asks Ted.

“Pirates were the criminals of the sea. They were known for attacking ships between the late 1500s to the early 1800s,” reads Mat.

“I know that the Jolly Roger is the black flag with the white skull and crossbones. It is the symbol for a pirate ship,” said Ted.

“Lots of the ideas we have today about pirates come from tales of adventures and buried treasure,” said Mat. “That is true. Many of the stories we hear about Blackbeard the Pirate are made up, but he was a real person,” said Ted.

“Hard to separate fact from fiction,” said Mat. “This will be an interesting research project then,” said Ted. Ted and Mat keep reading.
