

What is an Elephant?

Have you seen an elephant? What is an elephant? What do they look like? Read on for some interesting elephant facts.

What is an Elephant?

Elephants can be found in Asia and Africa. They like to live in thick rainforests and short grasslands.

What is an Elephant?

Elephants are the biggest land animal on our planet. The African elephant is bigger than the Asian elephant.

What is an Elephant?

Elephants are mammals and they have a long trunk. They have thick legs, a big head and big, flat ears that flap as they run. African elephants have bigger ears than Asian elephants.

What is an Elephant?

Elephants can use their trunks to pick up things. An elephant will use their trunk to pick up dust and spray it onto itself. Elephants may do this so that they can protect their skin from the heat of the sun and from insects.

What is an Elephant?

What is an Elephant?

Some elephants grow tusks. Tusks are long teeth that come out of their mouth.

What is an Elephant?

Because it is hard for elephants to lie down and get up, they like to nap when they stand in the day. Elephants also like to swim in deep rivers. They will sink down and lift their trunks up high for air. Some interesting facts about elephants!

What is an Elephant?